

Wheat and Barley Crop Performance under Different Sowing Methods under Poplar based Agroforestry System

S. K. Chauhan, K. S. Saini¹, H. S. Saralch, S. Rani*² and A. Verma³

*Department of Forestry and Natural Resources; ¹Department of Agronomy
Punjab Agricultural University, Ludhiana-141 004, India*

*²HFRI, Shimla-171 009; ³CAZRI Jodhpur, Rajasthan-342 001, India
E-mail: ssarangle@gmail.com*

Abstract. Two cereal crops, wheat and barley performance was assessed under different age poplar trees with different sowing methods. Significant differences for growth and crop yield were observed under canopy than in open condition in both the crops. Crop performance on raised bed and normal sowing was non-significant but better than other sowing methods i.e., zero tillage and open furrow method.

Key Words: Agroforestry, Barley, Cereal crops, Cultivation methods, Poplar, Wheat
